

Huawei sells optical modules to North Korea

Huawei is facing more trouble amid reports that it secretly helped build North Korea's 3G network. On Monday, The Washington Post documented how Huawei allegedly used a partner ...

The U.S. Justice Department has joined two other agencies probing Huawei Technologies Co. for possible violations of sanctions banning sales to Iran, according to two people ...

Huawei's StarryLink optical modules for data center networks offer seamless interconnection from GE to 800GE across all scenarios, delivering customers an ultra-reliable, long-distance, and highly secure ...

In early 2019, Huawei's alleged business with the Iranian regime, and to a lesser extent with the North Korean regime, led the U.S. government to take action to penalize the company.

The global optical transceiver market --critical to high-speed data communication and fiber-optic networks--has been experiencing significant transformation over the past several years. ...

Huawei has been accused of selling equipment to North Korea in breach of Washington sanctions. Drawing on internal Huawei documents leaked by former staff, the Washington Post says ...

Huawei has faced allegations, primarily from the United States and its allies, that its wireless networking equipment could contain backdoors enabling surveillance by the Chinese government.

Looking ahead, Huawei aims to collaborate with industry partners to further research and innovate in data center network optical modules, promoting intelligent network upgrades and...

It is said that they promised to purchase subsidiary materials such as optical cables from Korean companies (article from 2013), but when Huawei equipment was introduced, they broke all ...

Huawei sells optical modules to North Korea

Web: <https://www.tlaetsoglobal.co.za>