

The Astoria Borealis was an industrial accident that occurred at a Con Edison substation in Astoria, Queens, New York City, on December 27, 2018.

A new look at the electrical substation explosion that knocked out subway service in Brooklyn on Wednesday night that trapped thousands of riders. News 4 New York's Andrew Siff reports.

An explosion at a Brooklyn substation caused a short power outage in New York City that affected residents across all five boroughs, including those it ...

An explosion at a Brooklyn substation caused a short power outage in New York City that affected residents across all five boroughs, including those it trapped in elevators.

Crews in Brooklyn worked overnight to restore power to parts of New York City following an explosion at a Con Edison substation in the Dumbo section. FOX 5 NY's Lissette Nunez has the...

An equipment failure at a Con Edison substation in Brooklyn resulted in power outages across all five boroughs of New York City and multiple people trapped in elevators.

An explosion that blew a door off its hinges in an electric room that powers several New York City subway lines caused Wednesday night's service meltdown for thousands of riders, ...

Stay informed about explosions, loud booms, and emergency incidents in your area with real-time community reports and official updates.

A fiery explosion at a home in New York City left multiple people injured, including several officers who were responding to a domestic dispute and were flung into the air in the blast, police ...

Intense new video shows the electrical substation explosion that knocked out subway service for multiple lines in Brooklyn Wednesday night, trapping thousands of riders underground for hours.

The eerie blue light could be seen for miles and led to confusion and even some panic Thursday night. It was caused by a transformer explosion in Queens. Michelle Miller reports.

Web: <https://www.tlaetsoglobal.co.za>